CONTRACEPTION & ABORTION

- The Hunger Project promotes and provides female condoms as a means of preventing HIV/AIDS:
"Distribute female condoms. We inform women in Malawi to take control of their sexual and reproductive health with the distribution of female condoms at epicenter health centers."
- The Hunger Project features a story about one of its leaders who began a door-to-door initiative to provide women with contraceptives during the COVID-19 pandemic:
"One such local leader, Aisha Nanfuka, a 45-year-old mother of four daughters in Uganda, activated an innovative network of women volunteers that arranged door-to-door delivery of contraceptives and antiretroviral therapy along with gynecological care for the people of their community throughout the lockdown... They collected data on the community's health and ensured the continued distribution of oral contraceptive pills to women in the community who had previously registered for care and distributed antiretrovirals to HIV+ clients who couldn't walk the long distances to the health center."
- Posted the below picture on Facebook, advocating for contraception and "sexual and reproductive health and rights."

Mission

Facilitate individual and collective action to transform the systems of inequity that create hunger and cause it to persist.

Focus

agriculture, fishing, forestry, sustainable development, rural development, community organizing

- THP Ghana posts a video promoting the insertion of birth control implants:

"While the term "family planning" is often used synonymously with birth control, family planning is more than just about using contraception. From providing sexuality education to reproductive healthcare services, it poses numerous benefits for the wellbeing of both mother and child, as well as for the family and their community at large.

With funding from the Else-Kroner Fresenius Foundation we have commenced the training of health workers on the removal and insertion of birth control implants. They have been taken through various modules on family planning and also equipped with the skills sets to be able to perform the removal and insertion of Jodelle and Impanon NXT."
