Project HOPE

CONTRACEPTION

- Condoms are promoted as a method of HIV prevention.
- Its work in the Dominican Republic includes "The 5 Star Youth Program," which encourages parents to talk to their adolescent children about using contraception as a means of "protection."
- A mobile app developed by Project HOPE promises to provide adolescents:

  Information on where to obtain health services, contraception, and counseling to help combat the [Dominican Republic's] adolescent pregnancy rate of 23%.

- A 2026 article uses a statistic from the pro-abortion research organization Guttmacher Institute which states:

  If every woman in low- and middle-income countries had access to modern contraceptives and essential health services, unplanned pregnancies would drop by 68% and maternal deaths would drop by 62%.

LGBTQ+

- A 2024 press release condemns "Anti-LGBTQIA+ policies" in Africa. Though it denounces bills that suggest imprisoning those with same-sex attraction in certain countries, it also criticizes the prohibition of condom distribution as part of HIV prevention, as well as not permitting same-sex unions in certain African countries.
